Subject/TitleMulti-Motivations Hypothesis of Happiness: An Experimental Examination of Donating BehaviorAuthor(s)Lily Jiang; Hsi-Cheng YuJournal TitleReview of Social SciencesVol/Publishing DateVol.8 No.1 (2014/04)Page(s)1-40LanguageChineseAbstractAccording to Utilitarianism, happiness is the ultimate goal for human be The desire of a happy life drives people's behavior toward the purse happiness. Based on the theoretical framework of happiness proposed and Jiang (2012), this paper undertakes a series of experiments of investigate the determinants of money payoff to test the hypothes motivation-mental force-behavior, as well as the levels of happiness associ with behavioral decisions. The main results include: (1) The motivations instincts, social conformity and we-world are the main driving forces in der the al- location between money payoff and donation. (2) The approach-app	ion
Journal TitleReview of Social SciencesVol./Publishing DateVol.8 No.1 (2014/04)Page(s)1-40LanguageChineseAbstractAccording to Utilitarianism, happiness is the ultimate goal for human be The desire of a happy life drives people's behavior toward the pursu happiness. Based on the theoretical framework of happiness proposed and Jiang (2012), this paper undertakes a series of experiments of investigate the determinants of money payoff to test the hypothes motivation-mental force-behavior, as well as the levels of happiness associ with behavioral decisions. The main results include: (1) The motivations instincts, social conformity and we-world are the main driving forces in det the al-
Vol/Publishing DateVol.8 No.1 (2014/04)Page(s)1-40LanguageChineseAbstractAccording to Utilitarianism, happiness is the ultimate goal for human be The desire of a happy life drives people's behavior toward the purse happiness. Based on the theoretical framework of happiness proposed and Jiang (2012), this paper undertakes a series of experiments of investigate the determinants of money payoff to test the hypothes motivation-mental force-behavior, as well as the levels of happiness associ with behavioral decisions. The main results include: (1) The motivations instincts, social conformity and we-world are the main driving forces in deal DateVol.8 No.1 (2014/04)Page(s)1-40LanguageChineseAbstractAccording to Utilitarianism, happiness is the ultimate goal for human be The desire of a happy life drives people's behavior toward the purse happiness. Based on the theoretical framework of happiness proposed and Jiang (2012), this paper undertakes a series of experiments or investigate the determinants of money payoff to test the hypothes motivation-mental force-behavior, as well as the levels of happiness associ with behavioral decisions. The main results include: (1) The motivations instincts, social conformity and we-world are the main driving forces in decisions the al-
LanguageChineseAbstractAccording to Utilitarianism, happiness is the ultimate goal for human be The desire of a happy life drives people's behavior toward the purse happiness. Based on the theoretical framework of happiness proposed and Jiang (2012), this paper undertakes a series of experiments or investigate the determinants of money payoff to test the hypothes motivation-mental force-behavior, as well as the levels of happiness associ with behavioral decisions. The main results include: (1) The motivations instincts, social conformity and we-world are the main driving forces in decision the al-
Abstract According to Utilitarianism, happiness is the ultimate goal for human by The desire of a happy life drives people's behavior toward the purse happiness. Based on the theoretical framework of happiness proposed and Jiang (2012), this paper undertakes a series of experiments y investigate the determinants of money payoff to test the hypothes motivation-mental force-behavior, as well as the levels of happiness associ with behavioral decisions. The main results include: (1) The motivations instincts, social conformity and we-world are the main driving forces in decisions the al-
The desire of a happy life drives people's behavior toward the pursus happiness. Based on the theoretical framework of happiness proposed and Jiang (2012), this paper undertakes a series of experiments of investigate the determinants of money payoff to test the hypothes motivation-mental force-behavior, as well as the levels of happiness associ- with behavioral decisions. The main results include: (1) The motivations instincts, social conformity and we-world are the main driving forces in deci- the al-conflicts among various motivations lead individuals to adjust beh optimally.(3) In each extensional situation, an individual's anticipated deginess, measured in term of "just perceivable units" (Ng, 1996), from updated decision is significantly different from the levels attained in previous stages.(4) Once an individual's we-world motivation is evoked decision of the allocation between money payoff and donation brings higher degree of happiness which is never anticipated before.	iit of by Yu which es of iated of life iding roach avior ee of n the the , the Keyword(s) Happiness, Motivation, Donation, Mental-Force-Field, Util.	